MESSAGE

I had the honour of attending the Closing Ceremony of the first ever 'YathaKatha International Film & Literature Festival' (YKIFLF) in Mumbai on 28th November 2021.

It was really nice to see the Founder of YathaKatha Ms Charu Sharma having created an excellent platform for filmmakers and literary personalities to share and discuss their work in front of masters in the fields. I was pleased to note that YKIFLF showcased more than 35 films from national and international domains along with a series of panel discussions on cinema and literature. I was pleased to note that the festival laid thrust on the significance of language, especially Hindi and Sanskrit literature, creative writing in cinema, book adaptation process, women's perspective and contribution in storytelling, LGBTQ role in the context of cinema and literature and many more.

I have no doubt in my mind that the Festival will grow in popularity and stature every year. I congratulate YathaKatha and particularly Ms Charu Sharma for organizing the wonderful festival and wish the Festival Godspeed and best wishes.

FROM THE FOUNDER

“Yathakatha, which translates to “the story of stories,” seeks to foster an environment where stories—whether told through the lens of a camera or penned into words — can find their place in the world.”

As we reflect on the success of the 3rd Yathakatha International Film and Literature Festival, we are filled with a deep sense of gratitude and pride. The festival, which has now become a significant cultural event, was a vibrant celebration of creativity, storytelling, and the powerful fusion of film and literature.

This year’s festival was an extraordinary gathering of diverse voices, each contributing to a global conversation through their films, books, and shared experiences. From captivating screenings to thought-provoking literary discussions, we were reminded of the transformative power of art in shaping our world and connecting us beyond borders.

The Yathakatha Festival is more than just a platform for showcasing talent; it is a space for collaboration, discovery, and the exchange of diverse perspectives. The festival is a testament to the power of storytelling, reminding us of its ability to evoke change, promote empathy, and provide deeper insight into the human condition.

The success of this year’s festival is a testament to the continued importance of fostering cultural exchange and supporting the creative minds that push boundaries in both literature and cinema. We hope that the memories, insights, and inspirations shared here will continue to resonate and inspire long after the festival’s closing.

Thank you to all the filmmakers, writers, authors, artists, and attendees who made the 3rd Yathakatha Festival a truly memorable event. We look forward to the continued journey of celebrating stories that touch hearts, challenge minds, and unite us in our shared human experience.

With sincere appreciation,

CHARU SHARMA
FOUNDER YKIFLF

FROM THE FESTIVAL DIRECTOR

The idea behind YathaKatha is to create a space where various forms of storytelling, from audio-visual medium to the written word, can be shared and celebrated to create impact, provoke thought, and leave lasting impressions.

The 3rd YathaKatha International Film and Literature Festival provided a platform for filmmakers, writers, and artists from across the globe to share their stories, explore new narratives, and engage with audiences in meaningful ways. Through its carefully curated selection of films, discussions, and literary works, Yathakatha allowed participants to immerse themselves in a world of diverse voices, each telling stories that reflect the complexities of human experience.

This year's festival marked a significant milestone, solidifying its place as a key cultural event. This milestone is not just a celebration of the event itself, but a recognition of the collective effort, passion, and creativity that went into making it such a memorable experience. It is also a testament to the powerful fusion of film and literature, two forms of expression that have the ability to transcend boundaries and connect people from all walks of life.

We are immensely proud of the vibrant community that gathered to celebrate the art of filmmaking and storytelling and the invaluable connections made during the festival. The exchange of ideas, the inspiration ignited by each film and piece of literature, and the shared passion for storytelling made this year's event a resounding success.

We are deeply thankful to everyone—filmmakers, writers, artists, and attendees—whose contributions helped bring this vision to life, and we take great pride in the impact it has had on fostering an environment where stories, in all their forms, can find their rightful place in the world. As we look ahead to the future, a profound sense of gratitude and pride fills our hearts and excites us to continue this incredible journey of celebrating stories that connects us all, transcending boundaries and uniting us in our shared human experience.

With sincere appreciation,

Many many congratulations to YathaKatha Festival... I liked the name "YathaKatha".... they have started a very good initiative...I am very happy to be a part of this, though it is just the beginning and i hope it will grow in near future.

REKHA BHARADWAJ

I would like to say that it is indeed a entertaining and fruitful event because the panels are very engaging and even audience was able to share their thoughts and most importantly the youth of our country is engaging in such kind of festival and I wish that this kind of events should be there and I am saying this with my experiences.

ANUP JALOTA
SINGER & MUSICIAN

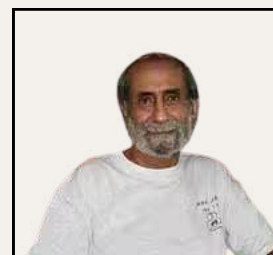

Well the very interesting fact is that literature and films come together is a very important combination because most of us don't realize that the good films come from good literature. If we keep this combination going, if every filmmaker keeps this in his head that good literature makes good cinema... we will be making better films.

ANANT MAHADEVAN
ACTOR & SCREENWRITER

Fantastic, unbelievable... i can't imagine such a huge work... the Himalayan work, I call it... being done with this festival... i am amused to see the scale of the festival and I salute to the team YathaKatha Festival for such great initiative, It was long due or should I say much needed event.

HOWARD RYPP
FILMMAKER ISRAEL

I liked this festival because it encases literature and cinema and it is something very attractive and interesting when you have literature and cinema couple together because people understands films but they have forgotten literature and many people from literature think that films are to down market, so i think there should be more festivals like this kind... and I loved being part of YathaKatha...

AMIT BEHL
ACTOR

The way festival is being organized, it is truly fantastic. I had my panel on dance in Bollywood and before that there was a music panel going on... the way a festival should be, it is like that. So i enjoyed it and i hope everybody present here felt the same. All the best to team and organizers.

SANDIP SOPARRKAR
CHOREOGRAPHER & ACTOR

Firstly thank you for having me here at YKIFLF... art, cinema, literature all under one roof... we cannot ask for more. But truly it is a fantastic event. SHARAD MALHOTRA

I think its a great idea to have literature and films in same festival... it makes a lot of sense because stories are often told via books than made into films these days. So its always good to have multiple voices and transfer it to films. So yeah, its good to have both together.

ANJALI BHUSHAN NUGYAL
FILMMAKER

I am associated with the festival since it's starting and it is such a unique and beautiful concept to fetch literature and films together. I wanted to say that the panels are much more interesting than Mami Film Festival here. I congratulate the team Yathakatha Festival.

KAMAL SWAROOP

A big congratulations on the wonderful initiative. It's heartening to see all those many ideations - random and structured - taking first baby steps towards creating a confluence of minds and arts for some meaningful socio-cultural Chintan and Manthan.

DR. PIYUSH ROY
AUTHOR, FILMMAKER & DEAN - LIBERAL ARTS
RV UNIVERSITY, BANGALORE

First of all I am grateful to YathaKatha and it is true that this is the start but the start is the most difficult thing to do... and that is the reason why we decided to partner with and the best thing is that you have engaged youth in this because it is very very important to inform them about our culture.

SANJAY TANDON
FOUNDER & CHAIRMAN ISAMRA

This is a very unique concept of bringing films and literature together because this way you expand the arena of a festival and attract more n more people. I think there is lot of energy, lot of enthusiasm and there is lot of thinking behind this event and it creates a wonderful environment especially for the youth wherein they can learn a lot of things from the panels being held here and there are opportunities to meet several masters of their crafts... and YathaKatha bring all that under one roof so Its great to be here.

TEAM YKIFLF

"The power of a team lies not in the individual, but in the collective strength of the associates working together toward a common purpose."

A team and a jury are both groups of individuals working together to achieve a specific outcome, but they differ in their purpose, structure, and dynamics. Team YathaKatha Festival is a group of individuals with complementary skills and roles who collaborate to achieve a shared objective. Their collective expertise and cooperation are the results of successful editions so far. They contribute their specialized knowledge, ideas, and efforts to solve problems, innovate, and meet deadlines, all while working in harmony toward a common goal.

On the other hand, our jury members are a group of craft masters of their respective fields. They review the participants' work with impartiality and objectivity to ensure fairness and justice. Our jury typically includes filmmakers, critics, authors, actors, and other industry experts. Their collective experience and unique perspectives ensure that the films are judged based on artistic merit, storytelling, technical execution, and innovation. Each jury member brings a personal viewpoint, contributing to a balanced and thoughtful evaluation process. The composition of the jury often reflects the values of the festival and the range of genres showcased. Some juries focus on specific categories, such as short films, documentaries, or experimental cinema, while others might evaluate films across a broader spectrum.

Our jury helps highlight underrepresented voices, experimental works, and unique storytelling approaches that might not have a chance to shine in mainstream distribution channels. In doing so, they contribute to the diversification and innovation within the global film landscape.
